Hello,

I streamed "Something They Need" on demand on AMC's website. The advertisement's volume is significantly higher than the tv show's. I believe this is a violation, yes?

Description

How is such violent (and sexual) content allowed on tv? It's not just this show of theirs, but walking dead, breaking bad, etc. that they show. It's pretty graphic. For example, the original psycho movie didn't show such violence, especially the shower scene. There's no reason to see him actually stabbing the man in the shower. Which had homosexual undertones as well because in the movie it's a woman that is killed. Not a naked man in the shower killed by man. AMC seems to be a satanic tv network and I believe this is a free channel, not a paid channel.

I am filing a huge complaint against the violence that was on display in the walking dead over the past year. The show has crossed a line into satanic over the top violence. If I knew the process to file a lawsuit and had the funds I would do so. This kind of violence has no place in this country. I can not believe how you could approve this for television. You should all be ashamed and may go have mercy on your souls.

Very upset and disappointed that apparently AMC is now using the "F" word in the Fear the Walking Dead and Walking Dead series. When will this deterioration of our language stop?! Can't the FCC do something to stop this? What happened to prime time limitation on bad language? Or is use of the "F" word now not considered foul language. Please, please do something to stop this!

Ticket: # 1969181 - NC State Lottery commercial

City/State/Zip: High Point, North Carolina 27265

Description

The North Carolina state lottery is currently airing a commercial that plays throughout the day on various channels in North Carolina. The commercial advertises a lottery scratch off game with a theme related to the TV show "The Walking Dead." In the commercial a person breaks off a human finger from a human hand (a zombie) and uses it to scratch off a lottery ticket. I have no problems with someone watching The Walking Dead for example if they choose to, but a commercial that can be seen randomly throughout the day by young children and other sensitive viewers is distressing. I am a 48 year old former law enforcement officer who regularly saw dismembered body parts at accidents and crime scenes, I found the imagery disturbing and I feel it is inappropriate for use in a commercial on regular TV.

Description

I cannot believe the lottery thinks their new Walking Dead scratch-off commercial is OK to air at 5, 6, 7 pm. This commercial features a frightened looking woman and a zombie. She handles many different weapons, and then grabs the zombie hand and wrenches its finger off so she can use the fingernail to scratch off the ticket. I like The Walking Dead. If this commercial aired after 9 pm, I would have no problem with it. But it airs very frequently on our ABC, NBC, CBS & Fox affiliate channels, during the evening news & Jeopardy when I am watching TV with my young children, and it is TOTALLY INAPPROPRIATE for children to see. It needs to only be allowed to air after 9 pm. I am not a cable subscriber. I use a digital antenna to get local signals.

I do not know who I file a complaint with, but I despise one commercial playing on my local channel. It is for the NC scratch off and it is for the Walking Dead. A lady takes a pair of lawn clippers and cuts off a dead man's finger and uses it to scratch off her ticket. This commercial is just disgusting and should not be on TV. Please inform me of who to file a complaint against. Thank you for your time.

Am I to understand that AMC channel has permission to use profane words on television show The Walking Dead and Fear the Walking Dead and other programs that are aired in prime time hours? There must a restriction of some words such as(fk) that was used on Fear the Dead at 9:00 pm on Sunday October 15th. This show is viewed by hundreds of people of all ages, surely I'm not the only one to complain. My entire family love the shows, including children ranging from 8 -17 years of age. The language is not necessary to the whole picture. (b) (6)

Description

I recently saw Ep. 1 of season 7 of The Walking Dead on Netflix and it was excruciatingly painful to watch. TV is usually a safe harbor for TV viewers. Yes, cable TV shows love to push the envelope and be "cutting edge", but there is a limit. Before the conversation was cable Vs. network, and cable violence was tolerated, but that's all gone with streaming. There is no network safety net anymore. Yet, TV must still remain a safe harbor for viewers. Ep. 1 of season 7 was no more than pure torture porn. Now, let me quantify what I'm saying. I'm a filmmaker and love horror films and thrillers and up to now have had no problem with seeing zombies hacked to pieces on TWD. But, watching human beings bashed over the head with a barbwired baseball bat over and over is just plain gore. Here I am days later and still freaked out from what I saw and can't erase the image from my memory. It was that horrific. TV must have standards and practices whether or not it's cable, network, or streaming. Viewers must be protected from extreme and excessive gore and violence. TWD crossed the line with episode 7 and they should clearly be told that dishing out torture porn is just not fun or creative storytelling.

Description

I am referring tot he Walking Dead program on AMC. The offensive words are becoming normalized on TV. With the introduction of Negan, words such as; dick, dickhead, balls, prick, ass are too common on this program. This is desensitizing children to such language and tone of the many reasons for the crudeness and lack of civility in our culture. Not to mention the extreme violence and graphics.

Good stories don't need such extreme language.

This morning my children asked to watch a movie on OnDemand (comcast). I went into the Kids Movie section and told them to pick something out. They selected The Secret Life of Pets (rated PG) and hit play. The first thing that pops up when this movie is selected is a Walking Dead commercial where a man is slicing a dead mans face off, making it into a mask and wearing it. Its absolutely ridiculous that someone like that is on a commercial to begin with, especially during a children's movie.

Hello,

I am writing to formally lodge a complaint in regards to the advertising of a horror show specifically, the walking dead and others, during family programming on the TruTV, Nat Geo Wild channel as well as the American Heroes Channel. We watch these educational channels during all hours of the day, and it appears the advertisements are graphic, frightening for children and repulsing. We do not watch these types of shows in our household as they do not send a positive message. We are kindly requesting such advertising be limited to related channels and removed during the day until 8pm. Thank you for your time.

CMT ran an ad by AMC.com for TWD (The Walking Dead) where they graphically show a man cutting, sewing and wearing the skin of another human as a mask. I'm watching Princess Diaries 2 for goodness sakes, and now I have that vivid sickening image in my mind! I couldn't get to the remote quick enough to change the channel before it was over. It's one thing if you willingly choose to watch that kind of show, but it's just plain WRONG to impose these sick images on people during commercials!!!!!!!!!!

I suddenly see nonstop ads for AMC's The Walking Dead on other channels, specifically, the Hallmark channel. It is a wholesome, clean channel, but these advertisements void that. They show people making gruesome masks made out of what appears to be rotting human skin. I do NOT want to see this or be exposed to it at all. It is incredibly offensive, disturbing and downright troubling and gruesome. Is there some way to make this stop, whether it is through the Hallmark Channel AMC, or DirecTV? I do NOT want to see this disgusting stuff ever again. I am ready to completely stop watching TV because of this. Seriously, it is disgusting.

While watching the Food Network's "The Pioneer Woman" at 8am on Sunday (2/10/19), they showed the walking dead commercial of a person sewing a mask made out of a human head. I changed the channel to TV Land so I wouldn't have to see it but then on TV Land while watching The Golden Girls, they showed that commercial, too. It's a gross, disgusting depiction that I believe is inappropriate for morning shows. I'm glad I wasn't eating my breakfast at the time but smakeries that kids may be watching these channels on a Sunday morning & have to endure this disgusting commercial.

Recently a commercial for The Walking Dead played during an episode of Mythbusters Jr. The commercial is so disturbing and graphic (depicts someone sewing what appears to be human skin and putting it on like a mask). It is highly inappropriate to play this during a show specifically geared toward kids. My daughter was left terrified and crying. Is there any thought or regulations behind pairing appropriate commercials based on the targeted viewer and the rating of the program? This commercial should only appear on late night R rated shows..if then.
